WARREN IS ELIMINATED

President Also Makes Known That Mellisham Man Is Considered for Cabinet Place Made Vacant by Resignation of Secretary Denby.

By United Press
WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—If President Coolidge takes the advice of the Navy Department, he will appoint an "iron man" to succeed Edwin Denby as secretary of the navy.

A man who will hold a big stick inside the department and take effective measures to check a waning morale is the opinion of the Navy today. The informed persons declare.

An enormous number of deserters, steady resignation of officers and a run of disasters at San Diego, Cal., where seven destroyers were lost at Vera Cruz where the Tacoma was wrecked, and minor accidents elsewhere are the fruits of conditions that require harsh measures for a cure, Navy men said.

President Coolidge has blessed the hope of some with an unofficial announcement that no naval officer will be named and nobody from Mellisham's state. The apparently eliminated Charles F. Warren of Detroit, who was believed to have the inside track for the post, Warren is now mentioned for Attorney General Daugherty's job should Daugherty quit.

Miles Polinder, United States ambassador to Peru, was much talked of by Denby's successor. He was formerly acting chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee. His name was brought in when Navy officials said Denby would be succeeded by a former secretary of the Navy.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Charles D. Warren, who has been mentioned in the past as a possible successor to Secretary of Navy Denby, is considered by the White House to have no chance of being appointed to the post.

Warren left for Detroit still declaring he had no wish to leave the post. He is the White House's best kept secret.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.—Following a conference with the cabinet, President Coolidge today declared that the Navy Department is not in a position to recommend a successor to Secretary Denby.

Burns Healed Without Leaving A Scar
My sister was burned last winter when putting coal oil on a dented fire and the flame burst out into her face. We used ointment but San Cura didn't even have a physician and in almost an incredible short time her face was perfectly healed without a scar. It is the best thing for burns that I have ever seen. Have also used it for other things. Just lately an infant fell on and immediately it was healed—Lillian S. Pitts, 15 Iowa Circle, Washington, D. C. Try San Cura Ointment for Old Sores, Piles, Eczema, Cuts, Bruises and Chapped Skin. It gives quick relief, soothes the pain and draws out poison, or money back, 30c and 60c. Try San Cura Soap for banishing Blackheads, Pimples and clearing the complexion. 25c at Conneville Drug Co., Conneville, or Broadway Drug Co., Scottdale—Advertisement.

Daily Fashion Hints

PROMISE OF SPRING WEATHER brings out gay scarfs of wool and silk. The long one is a wool handloom, one that is interesting for its scalloped and tassled ends, as well as its lovely blue, orange and white color. The silk scarf, worn like a stock, makes an interesting accessory for the very tailored suit so much in vogue this spring. The girl with the long scarf wears a frock of knitted silk with a most unusual pocket buttoned on to the belt with big, round, blue buttons that are also tucked down the front and on the sleeves.

MEN WHO SUCCEED

Know What Is Taking Place in the Business World. Once in a while a man makes a success of business who has no knowledge of the underlying factors which make or govern all commercial and financial activities—but only once in a while; most men who succeed do so because they are informed. To the well-informed, there is always something valuable in the Trade Report which the First National of Connelville issues during the last week of each month—you should read it. It's FREE. Send your address to the bank.—Advertisement—110-27-28.

'First Aid' For Sick Children

THE experienced mother is not alarmed when a child becomes sick. She knows that most of the ailments of childhood are trifling. If it seems serious she calls a doctor, but whether or not she calls him she gives, first of all, a good laxative medicine. The doctor would advise that anyway. It is his "first aid." Such experienced mothers as Mrs. Everett, E. Hunt of Belmont, Okla., who has three children and never any sickness, and Mrs. P. B. Kuletski of Prosser, Wash., always give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at the first indication of sickness. Such timely doses have saved them much worry.

The Meaning of "Good"
All doctors agree that a thorough cleaning out of the bowels is of first importance for it removes dangerous intestinal poisons. They will also advise a "good laxative" and by "good" they mean one that is effective and yet harmless. They know that there are physicians that never should be given to children - colic, which is mercury and loosens the teeth; phenolphthalein, a constipating drug that causes skin trouble; and, which concentrate the blood and dry up the saliva. They consider Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin safe for all ages as they know it is a simple vegetable compound of Epsom salts with pepsin and agreeable aromatics. The formula is on the package.

Give Laxative for Colds
Adults should have at least one movement of the bowels every 24 hours, and children two or three. Failure to have it means constipation, then headache, drowsiness, loss of appetite. Give a dose of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at bedtime, and there will be health and good feeling by morning. A dose once has thin a coat, and a bottle can be had at any drug store. Colds and constipation come together, so if you notice coughing or sneezing stop it at once with Syrup Pepsin.

The COTTAGE GARDENER

To Supply Table With Vegetables

Coldframe Is Advocated as Means of Providing the Crispy Greens.

Kitchen gardens were a necessary adjunct to the home in the earlier days but at present a kitchen coldframe is advocated as a means of supplying the family table with fresh lettuce, parsley, radishes, cress and other vegetables at periods of the year when it is too cold to grow these things in the open ground. While it is true that the coldframe may not give very good results during the winter months especially in the northern part of the country, yet in the early spring excellent results may be had from its use according to the United States Department of Agriculture.

The construction of a coldframe is comparatively simple as the side walls may be made of boards, brick, hollow tile or concrete. Where the construction is of boards, cypress lumber should be used, and it is a good plan to have the walls made double and some dry straw or planks, well shavings packed in the space between them. If the walls are of brick, they should be plastered both inside and out to make them air tight. Hollow tile walls should also be plastered the same as brick.

One of the best types of construction is simply to put in a little foundation then set up frames and tamp in well mixed concrete consisting of about three parts clean, broken stone or gravel, two parts sharp sand and one part cement. The ingredients should be placed on a mixing board or in a box and thoroughly mixed while dry then water added gradually and the mass turned three or four times until it is thoroughly mixed and is of a consistency that can readily be tamped as it is put into the forms.

The size of coldframes to build will depend upon circumstances. Standard frame or hotbeds are 8 by 4 feet in size and the frame may be constructed to accommodate one, two or even as high as five or six of these units. The front or south wall of the coldframe should be about 12 inches in height while the rear or north wall should be 24 to 30 inches high, and the ends sloping to correspond with the front and rear walls. Wooden frames preferably of 2 by 6 cypress lumber should be bedded on top of the wall and held in place by bolts.

that extend down into the concrete. Rafter upon which the wash rest are fitted to these plates. At the upper side of the bed a sort of overhanging board should be put on in such manner that the end of the wash will slide up beneath it making the bed tight. The lower end of the wash should extend slightly over the edge of the bed to carry off the water.

In addition to the wash covering straw mats, blankets or even old carpet may be used to keep out cold. Where the coldframe can be located on the south side of the garage this will give it extra protection. A well constructed bed of this character will provide lettuce and other salad crops without the application of artificial heat. Plants may be started in the living room during February and planted in the bed in March, giving a supply of salad for the table during the spring months or until outdoor let, end radishes and spinach can be grown.

ORNAMENTAL BARBERRY

Thunberg's barberry one of the Japanese barberries is a handsome ornamental and defensive hedge plant. It will grow four or five feet high and as many broad. It may be left without pruning or be trained into a compact formal hedge. It bears an abundance of bright red berries that hold on the plant all winter but does not harbor the wheat-rust fungus.

The headquarters of our great postal system are located in this building on Pennsylvania avenue, Washington, D. C. Long before official reports on the condition of business in all sections of the country can be prepared and forwarded to Washington, the Post Office Department knows exactly what is going on. Prosperity is instantly reflected to an amazing degree in postal receipts and urgent requests for additional carriers and clerks. Never before was the postal service called upon to perform such a tremendous task as that of the holiday season recently passed and the rush of business has continued to the present. Indicating unprecedented national prosperity. This mammoth service is under the direction of Postmaster General Harry New, formerly a senator from Indiana, and one of those most intimately acquainted with the late President Harding.

The Paramount

THE DRIVIN' FOOL—The last big picture today at this theatre is Wally Van and Patsy Ruth Miller in Drivin' Fool, a comedy of a world-loved novel by Charles Dickens will be shown. As a book, David Copperfield was one that Charles Dickens liked the best himself. Now that it is to be seen as a picture its popularity is certain to be even greater. It is a known fact that underneath the fiction lay something of the author's life. His death giving further assurance of this when he wrote the following as he was winding up the work on David Copperfield: "I am within three paces of the shore, and am strangely divided as usual in my mind between sorrow and joy. It were to say half of what Copperfield makes me feel tonight how strongly even to you (this is the recipient of the note) I should be turned inside out. I seem to be sending some part of myself into the Shadowy World."

The Soisson

THE GREEN GODDESS—Featuring Alice Joyce and George Arliss. An action picture today and tomorrow at this theatre. The costume, in magnificent and the settings designed by Clark Robinson are emotionally beautiful. In some scenes a secret thought and a single word and they have been expertly handled by Sidney Olcott. The picture is a masterpiece of dramatic art. The story deals with the adventures of a young Englishman who, through an airplane, has fallen into the hands of a cruelly unscrupulous Indian Rajah. It seems that this brother of the Rajah who rules over the kingdom of India in the wilds of the Himalayas has been condemned to death by the British government as a means of revenge the Rajah decides to put his unexpected visitor to death. He convinces his ignorant subjects that these English people have been sent by their deity, the Green Goddess, as compensation for the loss of their princess his brother. The people demand that the Rajah be sacrificed. The Rajah is attracted by the young Englishman (Arliss) and offers to spare his life if he consents to be his wife. Upon this general situation William Archer, a author of the play and Forrest Halsey the screen adaptor have built a vehicle of tremendous dramatic strength. No discernible entertainment seeker should overlook The Green Goddess.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Women Men Marry will be shown.

Mrs. Coffin and Mr. Burton will wed. They are finding it possible to smile in spite of their disappointment because both the Count and Countess Zichy and the Count and Countess Salm are having just over so annoying a time trying to keep the wolf from the door.

In addition to being a motion picture studio the huge building at Astoria, Long Island was a Paramount picture are made in the East was turned into a nursery kindergarten and school during the filming of "Pied Piper Malone". In the cast for this Booth Tarkington story are fifteen children ranging from the ages of one year to ten and their welfare was looked after carefully as it would be if they were at home. For the young picture players the property department provided more toys and games than the youthful minds ever dreamed existed. A nice cozy place was provided for the play room and when the children were not on the set with Mr. Meighan or Mrs. Wilson they could be found having a time of their lives with the playthings. For

TIDAL WAVE DATA AID TO SHIPPING

Safety Depends on Knowledge of Harbors.

The recent groundings of the world's two biggest ocean liners, the Levinthun and the Majestic, show how essential to the safety of the world's shipping is an intimate knowledge of the tidal and current fluctuations of the world's great harbors, says a bulletin of the National Geographic Society headquarters, "and emphasizes the importance of one of the phases of the work of the United States coast and geodetic survey."

"New York harbor is not a single waterway, but a series of communicating ones, with two entrances from the sea. A territory larger than Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island together, drains into the Atlantic through three bays, four straits, and one great and several small tidal rivers. The fresh water from this large area complicates the problem of giving the navigator definite data as to flood and ebb and current so that he may safely maneuver his craft at all times."

Liner's Needs Considered.

"The United States coast and geodetic survey has given to navigators a definite picture of the conditions they must meet in reaching their great harbors. To start engineers the information necessary to the proper arrangement of docking facilities, and to sanitary engineers new and basic data that has an important bearing on the problem of sewage disposal."

"Working quietly on the great fundamental problems of navigation, the coast and geodetic survey doesn't make much noise, and the world at large knows comparatively little of one of the most highly technical of the scientific bureaus of the United States government."

"And yet every ship that sails the seas, every passenger that comes into port, every article on the supercargo's manifest are served in a very concrete, if unsuspected, way by the survey."

"Two things the navigator must have if he is to bring his craft with its human and material cargo safely into port—a knowledge of the tides of the compass and a picture of channel and harbor conditions."

Needle Full of Vagaries.

"The needle of the mariner's compass has been shown to be as full of vagaries as mid-winter weather. Men used to think that it could always be depended on to point to the magnetic pole. But local influences distract it from its proper position in ways that are sometimes startling. If the sailor has a sweetheart in every port, the magnetic needle has a secondary attraction in many quarters. Looking at a magnetic declination chart we see deeply wavy curves which proclaim loudly the influence of these influences in weaving the needle away from the straight and narrow of its true direction. Magnetic surveys of the sea in general and along the coast in particular, are a supreme necessity in the accurate guidance of ships over the trackless ocean and into the world's ports."

"Examining the line of the 15-degree west declination, we find it sweeping over the sea in a north-westerly direction. With comparatively small variations from accuracy until it approaches the north shore of Massachusetts. There it swings radically to the west and as land is reached swings back until it points almost due northeast at more than a right angle to its recent position as it rounds the Cape Ann peninsula."

"The same condition obtains in the Undergates west declination which sweeps over the Atlantic toward New York. Approaching the waters between Long Island and Sandy Hook the needle adheres closely to its proper direction. But when it reaches the Hudson river it is pulled around until it seems to forget all about its fundamental affection and goes on a lark that causes it to swing around through almost or quite a quarter circle from its accustomed position."

"No wonder a magnetic survey is needed to warn the mariner of the vagaries of the magnetic needle when it parallels itself to fall so fully under the spell of the Great White way that it wanders 90 degrees away from its path of solar duty."

Thorough Soundings Object.

"The need of more thorough soundings in harbors and on rocky coasts grows greater as the volume and complexity of shipping grows and the size of craft increases."

"Soundings made with lead lines can be depended on to discover the main underwater elevations, but the waters off the New England shores, the Pacific shores and Alaska abound in pin-point rocks—Washington monuments of the sea. They rise to sharp points almost to the surface, which deflect a lead line, even though the lead may, as a slender chance, land on top of them."

"Thus it came to be that they passed undiscovered and uncharted until some ship chanced to cut afloat one of them, as the United States cruiser Brooklyn did in the harbor of New Bedford, Mass."

How Wire Drag Is Used.

"Lately a wire drag has been evolved. It is stretched between two launches or other boats which run parallel to one another anywhere from 100 to 25,000 feet apart."

"The lower wire sweeps through the water at a depth well below the keels of ships of the deepest drafts and any obstacle that rises above that depth is readily detected. A shipping of immense volume moves through the pin-point and bowdler-interrupted waters of the New England coast and the survey is working aggressively with the limited funds at its disposal to flush the sweeping of these waters and to discover all such obstructions to navigation before they register their presence by forcing holes into the hulls of hapless liners."

"Tidal banks and sand bars must also be watched carefully, for the unexpected attack by winds, waves, and currents upon the shore cause, particularly in stormy weather, the water to be converted into a sort of huge mill in which the material wrested loose from its position is ground to sand and deposited elsewhere, filling up channels and obstructing navigation generally."

SENATOR BORAH: "HAVEN'T I TOLD YOU TO QUIT FOLLOWING ME AROUND?"

By MORRIS

"Automobiles and motor boats have made heretofore inaccessible shores team with the activities of civilization, and now knowledge of the laws of such shore evolution must be mastered and remedies found for conditions of erosion that menace life and property in the seaside communities."

"And so it happens that the coast and geodetic survey under the direction of Col. E. Lester Jones, must be ever on the alert to protect shipping from the perils of demoralized magnetic needles and changing shallow water conditions."

Stone-Age Houses Are Rebuilt on Lake Shore

All visitors to the Lake of Constance in Baden know that on its banks may be found remains of so-called lake dwellings, prehistoric habitations built on a platform supported on piles. In Switzerland and in Austria, where pile dwellings of the same kind have also been discovered, the first reconstruction of these ancient villages was tried. At present reconstructions of a similar kind are being made at Unter-Urdingen on the Lake of Constance.

Last year a family house and a "men's house" were erected on the ancient piles. Both are imitations of the oldest types of lake dwellings belonging to the Stone Age. A third house, imitating the later type of the Bronze Age is to be built next.

These dwellings are furnished with the various implements and articles of daily use found in the neighborhood and are instructive prehistoric museums on a small scale. It is now planned to reconstruct a cluster of dwellings showing almost a village formation on the Swiss bank of the lake at Barmatingen.—Christian Science Monitor.

Screws Used in Watches

Certain of the screws used in making watches are so tiny that 100,000 of them could be placed in a woman's thumb. These screws are cut by a machine from steel wire that is only four-one-thousandths of an inch in diameter, and as the chips fall it looks as though the operator were simply shaving the wire for his own amusement. No screws can be seen, and yet a screw is made at every third operation. Studied through a microscope, it will be seen that each little finished screw is evenly grooved at the proportion of 200 threads to the inch. It is estimated that a single machine turns out about a million a month. They are polished in wholesale fashion—ten thousand at a time. They would never be finished taken separately.

Stone Fish Work of

Prehistoric Sculptor

Deep in the original channel of the Willamette river at Oregon City, Ore., was found recently a "stone fish," which has been added to a collection of relics of prehistoric life in the possession of D. A. Hollingsworth. The shape was uncovered when excavation was being made for an addition to a local paper mill.

The stone, about sixteen inches long and seven inches high, is roughly carved in the shape of a fish, with mouth, eyes, gills and fins. Hollingsworth believes the stone, which shows signs of being worn by water, was carried along the river in floods of bygone years from the upper Willamette, possibly from the region of the mound builders near the present site of Albany, Ore. In his opinion, some early-day savage with an artistic bent saw the stone by chance and, noting its general shape was that of a fish, took his rough instruments and carved in the eyes, gills and fins.

EXCHANGED PIPES FOR LAND

Three Hundred Were Part of the Price William Penn Paid for Tract in Seventeenth Century.

Pipes in the seventeenth century were largely made in Holland of pipe-clay imported from England—to the disgust and loss of English pipe-makers. In 1681 the company of tobacco-pipe-makers petitioned parliament to forbid the export of tobacco pipe clay, since by the manufacture of pipes in Holland their trade was much damaged. The company's request was granted, but in the next year it again found it necessary to go to parliament, showing their threatened ruin because coals, bakers and ale-house keepers and others made pipes, but so unskillfully that they were brought into disrepute, and requesting that none be allowed to follow the trade who had not been apprentices seven years.

During the latter part of the Seventeenth-century English pipes were presented by colonists in America to the Indians. They subsequently became valuable as objects of barter or purchase value in exchange for land. In 1697 120 pipes and 100 jaw's-harps were given for a strip of country near Timber creek in New Jersey. William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania, purchased a tract of land, and 300 pipes were included in the articles given in the exchange.

The Egotist

A couple of cluemen were speaking of a fellow member when one remarked: "I dislike to say it, but really Reginald is the most egotistical young man I have ever met."

"What leads you to say that?"

"Why, last week on the occasion of his birthday he sent a collect message congratulating his mother."

Carmel Cognoscenti Bar Modern Devices

An artistic Blythium where streets and sewers and other evidences of modern civilization do not exist, the kindly across where, according to Carmel, no usury stands to retard creative inspiration, freedom from society's fetters.

Such is the incentive of the new artists' retreat that well-known members of the Carmel Cognoscenti have established at Nott's Landing, an abandoned town 15 miles from the scene of Carmel itself.

For Carmel, declare these anti-conventionalists, is fast becoming too modern to be the ideal playground for brain children. New sewers, an incorporated city government, all the conventionalities of a stylish summer colony, do not blend harmoniously with ideal artistic conception, they declare.

The movement for an artistic exodus is well under way. It would seem, with Evan Lloyd Mosher, painter; John Howard Flanner, composer, and Herbert Hiron, writer-poet, already living at Nott's Landing, Carmel editor, announcing his plans of following suit.

With the advent of numerous summer visitors Carmel, the artists' state, has taken on too many aspects of a real city, whereas it was once reputed with freedom and artistic communion.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Roman Generals Liked Spring Mineral Water

The Romans, who knew much about external and internal cleanliness that was forgotten after the downfall of their power, attached the greatest importance to the drinking of mineral water. At Aix-la-Therme, for instance, in the Pyrenees, the waters were used by the Roman conquerors, and St. Louis had a pond built there for the use of Crusaders who returned from the Holy Land stricken with leprosy. This pond is still in existence.

It was in the Nineteenth century, however, that Aix-la-Therme was adapted to modern needs and became a popular resort. Its waters contain sodium sulphide and are very beneficial for rheumatism and gout.

In this century the term "thermal" is not in vogue, one seldom hearing the term "thermal resort" applied to places where persons go to take a "cure." In Europe, on the other hand, the word is in common use, and a thermal resort is recognized as a place where waters possess certain healing and health-giving properties, and which has also been developed to take proper care of those who repair for a cure or to enjoy a period of rest and recreation.—Detroit News.

Chinese Easy to Learn

Chinese in its spoken form is a simpler language than even English. There are none of the terrors of conjugation, declension or the inflections that mark European languages. Western children born in China with equal opportunities of hearing Chinese and English spoken in the home learn Chinese first because it is easier. In a year of earnest study a good foundation can be laid. Knowledge of the new Chinese alphabet enables the beginner to use the characters without the aid of oral instruction. It is thus possible for the student to carry on his own study after a start has been made with an instructor.

For the Forgetful

"What's that string tied around your finger for?"

"That's to remind me to look in my pocket for a memorandum to put a note on my desk to call my wife and ask her if she's forgotten this is our anniversary date."—American Legion Weekly.

"Utopian but foolish," Sir Timothy declared. "All the same, Mr. Legman, let me tell you this. You have a curious attraction for me. When I was asked why I had invited you to the Sanctuary last night, I frankly could not answer the question. I didn't know. I don't know. Your dislike of me doesn't seem to affect the question. I was glad to have you there last night. It pleased me to hear you talk, to hear your views of things. I feel that I shall have to be very careful, Mr. Legman, or."

"Or what?" Francis demanded. "Or I shall even welcome the idea of having you for a son-in-law," Sir Timothy concluded reluctantly. "Make my excuses to Mr. Shephard. An revoir!" Shephard came in as the door closed behind the departing visitor. He listened to all that Francis had to say, without comment.

"If the Waller House," he said, at last, "is so carefully guarded that Sir Timothy has been informed of my watching the place and has been made aware of my mild questionings, it must be because there is something to conceal. I may or may not be on the track of Mr. Reginald Wilmore, but the detective concluded, 'of one thing I am becoming convinced—the Waller House will pay for watching.'"

It was a day when chance was kind to Francis. On his way towards the Boulevard, he came face to face with Margaret Hillitch, leaving from the docks of one of the great steamship companies.

She, too, came to a standstill at seeing him. Her first exclamations betrayed a surprise which bordered on consternation. Then Francis, with a sudden inspiration, pointed to the long envelope which she was carrying in her hand.

"You have been to book a passage somewhere?" he exclaimed.

"The monosyllable was in her usual level tone. Nevertheless, he could see that she was shaken."

"You were going away without saying again?" he asked reproachfully.

"Yes," she admitted.

"Why?"

She looked up, and down a little helplessly.

"I owe you an explanation for my conduct," she said. "Please let me pass."

"Could we talk for a few minutes, please?" he begged. "Tell me where you were going?"

"Oh, back to lunch, I suppose," she answered.

"Your father has been up, looking for you," he told her.

"I telephoned to the Sanctuary," she replied. "He had just left."

"I am very anxious," he continued, "not to distress you, but I cannot let you go away like this. Will you come to my rooms and let us talk for a little time?"

She made no answer. Somehow, he realized that speech just then was difficult. He called a taxi and handed her in. They drove to Clarissa street to silence. He led the way up the stairs, gave some quick orders to his servant whom he met coming down, ushered her into his sitting room and saw her ensconced in an easy-chair.

"Please take off that terrible veil," he begged.

"It is pinned onto my hat," she told him.

"Then off with both," he insisted. "You can't eat luncheon like that. I'm not going to try and bully you. If you've booked your passage to Timbuctoo and you really want to go—why, you must. I only want the chance of letting you know that I am coming after you."

She took off her hat and veil and threw them onto the sofa, glancing sideways at a mirror let into the door of a cabinet.

"My hair is awful," she declared.

He laughed gaily, and turned around from the sideboard, where he was busy mixing cocktails.

"Thank heavens for that touch of humanity!" he exclaimed. "A woman who can bother about her hair when she takes her hat off, is never past praying for. Please drink this."

She obeyed. He took the empty glass away from her. Then he came over to the hearthrug by her side.

"Do you know that I kissed you last night?" he reminded her.

"I do," she answered. "That is why I have just paid eighty-four pounds for a passage to Buenos Aires."

"I should have enjoyed the trip," he said. "Still, I'm glad I haven't to go."

"Do you really mean that you would have come after me?" she asked curiously.

"Of course I should," he assured her. "Believe me, there isn't such an obstinate person in the world as the man of early middle-age who suddenly discovers the woman he means to marry."

"But you can't marry me," she protested.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Because I was Oliver Hillitch's wife for one thing."

"Look here," he said. "If you had been Beatrix's wife, it wouldn't make the least difference to me. You haven't given me much of a chance to tell you so yet, Margaret, but I love you."

She sat a little forward in her chair, her eyes were fixed upon his wonderfully.

"But how can you?" she exclaimed.

"You know nothing of me except my associations, and they have been horrible. What is there to love in me? I am a frozen-up woman. Everything is dead here," she went on, clapping her hand to her heart. "I have no sentiment, no passion, nothing but an animal desire to live my life luxuriously and quickly."

He smiled confidently. Then, with very little warning, he sank on one knee, drew her face to his, kissed her lips and then her eyes.

"Are you so sure of all these things, Margaret?" he whispered. "Don't you think it is, perhaps, because there has been no one to care for you as I do—as I shall—to the end of my days?"

The lily you left on your chair last night was like you—fair and stately and beautiful, but a little bruised. You will come back to the world. My love will bring you. My care. Believe it, please!"

Then he saw the first signs of change in her face. There was the faintest shade of almost shell-like pink underneath the creamy-white of her cheeks. Her lips were trembling a little, her eyes were misty. With a sudden passionate impulse, her arms were around his neck, her lips sought his of their own accord.

"Let me forget," she sobbed. "Kiss me—let me forget!"

Francis's servant was both heavy-footed and discreet. When he entered the room with a tray, his master was standing at the sideboard.

"I've done the best I could, sir," he announced a little apologetically. "Shall I lay the cloth?"

"Leave everything on the tray, Brooks," Francis directed. "We will help ourselves. In an hour's time bring coffee."

"The man glanced around the room. 'There are glasses on the sideboard, sir, and the corkcrew is here. I think you will have everything you want.'"

He departed, closing the door behind him. Francis held out his hands to Margaret. She rose slowly to her feet, looked in the glass helplessly and then back at him. She was very beautiful but a little dazed.

"Are we going to have luncheon?" she asked.

"Of course," he answered. "Did you think I meant to starve you?"

He picked up the long envelope which she had dropped upon the carpet, and threw it onto the sofa. Then he drew up two chairs to the table, and opened a small bottle of champagne.

"I hope you won't mind a plain," he said. "Really, Brooks hasn't done so badly—pate de foie gras, hot roast and Devonshire butter. Let me spread some for you. A cold chicken afterward, and some strawberries. Please be hungry, Margaret."

She laughed at him. It occurred to him suddenly, with a little pang, that he had never heard her laugh before. It was like music.

"Too happy," she murmured.

"Believe me," he assured her, as he buttered a piece of toast, "happiness and danger might well be twins. They go so well together. Misery can take away one's appetite. Happiness, when one gets over the gulph of it, is the best tonic in the world. And I never saw anyone, dear, with whom happiness acted so well," he added, pausing in his task to bend over and kiss her. "Do you know you are the most beautiful thing on earth? It is a lucky thing we are going to live in England, and that these are sober, matter-of-fact days, or I should have committed to fighting duels all the time."

She had a momentary relapse. A look of terror suddenly altered her face. She caught at his wrist.

"Don't!" she cried. "Don't talk about such things!"

He was a little bewildered. The moment passed. She laughed almost apologetically.

"Forgive me," she begged, "but I hate the thought of fighting of any sort. Some day I'll explain."

Bronchitis Best Treated With Vapors

Direct Treatment with Vaporizing Salve Immediately Reaches Congested Air Passages.

If a cold has been neglected and has gone down into the chest, producing acute bronchitis, thoroughly soaked the skin over throat and chest with hot, wet towels to open the pores. Then massage briskly with Vicks for five minutes, spread on thickly and cover with two thicknesses of hot flannel cloth.

For hours after Vicks is applied the vapors of Camphor, Menthol, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, etc., are inhaled directly into the congested air passages. At the same time Vicks is absorbed thru and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

Being externally applied, Vicks is especially good for children and is used by millions of mothers to prevent or relieve cold troubles.

a very excellent but solitary breakfast this morning, and it seems a long time ago."

"It seems amazing to think that you spent last night at the Sanctuary," she reflected.

"And that you and I were in a post," he reminded her, "in the pool of darkness where the trees met, and the lilies leaned over to us."

"And you nearly upset the punch," "Nothing of the sort! As a simple matter of fact, I was very careful. But," he proceeded, with a sudden wave of memory, "I don't think my heart will ever beat normally again. It seemed as though it would tear its way out of my side when I leaned toward you, and you knew, and you lay still."

She laughed.

"You surely didn't expect I was going to get up? It was quite encouraging enough to remain passive. As a matter of fact," she went on, "I couldn't have moved. I couldn't have uttered a sound. I suppose I must have been like one of those poor birds you read about, when some devouring animal creeps for its last spring."

"Compliments already!" he remarked. "You won't forget that my name is Francis, will you? Try and practice it while I carve the chicken."

"You carve very badly, Francis," she told him demurely.

"My dear," he said, "thank heavens we shall be able to afford a butler! By-the-by, I told your father this morning that I was going to marry you, and he didn't seem to think it possible because he had two million pounds."

"Brought it in murmured. "When did you see my father?"

"He came to my room in the Temple soon after I arrived this morning. He seemed to think I might know where you were. I dare say he won't like me for a son-in-law," Francis concluded with a smile. "I can't help that. He shouldn't have let me go out with you in a post."

"There was a disaster knock at the door. Brooks made his apologetic and somewhat troubled entrance.

"Sir Timothy Krast is here to see you, sir," he announced. "I refrained to say that you were not at home."

"But I happened to know otherwise," a still voice remarked from outside. "May I come in, Mr. Legman?"

Sir Timothy stepped past the servant, who at a sign from Francis disappeared, closing the door behind him.

Fashion Changes in Paris Frocks

New Ideas Are Presented in Modes Offered by Leading Designers.

American women are timid about adopting any radically new ideas in the matter of dress. Such is the opinion given recently by a famous couturier of Paris. But he said also that she will go far in expressing the latest style, once her approval is won. This, after all, is the view of only one authority on the subject, and may be taken for whatever it is worth, observes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times.

It is quite certain that the American woman has demonstrated to the world that she has a mind and a standard of her own, and an individuality which she desires to express. Moreover, she has given such evidence of artistic ability in designing her clothes and such taste and distinction in wearing them that the creators of fashions know it is well worth their while to work for her favor.

There was a time when the American woman may have merited the comment that she was like one of a flock of sheep, following the leader wherever he led. But now she knows what she wants and will wear what she chooses, and she does it as well as she can.

Changes in fashions are interesting, but a busy and perhaps fagged world finds them taxing. Unless one is prepared to accept whatever the dressmaker recommends, the new ideas must be carefully thought out and the decision must have concentrated attention, and all of this demands time.

Occasionally there are modes that become established and find such favor that they endure season after season, and are reluctantly relinquished. There have been many in the last three or four years. The slipover, the one-piece gown, the tunic, the belted gown that requires no corset to give it form—all of these, making for comfort, have been beloved by women of all weights and ages. Then came the soft materials, the graceful draperies that looked as though they were blown by a breeze, and in their floating looseness were so flattering that they will long be with us, differing little. A woman is not eager to change from a becoming style. If it happens to suit her type it is doubly valued.

Introduce New Features. Yet it is not after this manner that the Old World moves, and the changes must come. The ideas offered in advance are somewhat incidental and may not be regarded as establishing anything wholly different. They may vary only slightly the styles that have been acceptable for a season or more. These new shown are modifications in modes that will serve to introduce some new features in gowns appropriate for either late winter or early spring.

The evolution of certain ideas is worth studying. The tunic in some is obviously lengthened with a flounce, pleated, straight or circular. In others it is shortened to the line of a hip-length blouse. Jenny has done an attemptable afternoon wear with an outer wrap or fur piece, or for any daytime occasion in a warm climate.

Deep Flounce Is Used. Hence is another Parisian authority from whom come a number of attractive midseason frocks in which the deep flounce is featured, usually in narrow plait. One Jenny Hill model is established in dark blue satin crepe, pleated from collar to hem, the tunic being slightly bloused and belted in a deep waistline.

Patron wishes to use the circular flounce, whether in one deep ruffle or in a number, and sends to a New York house a pretty frock that will illustrate the idea in several variations. It is of gray crepe marocain, the skirt narrow and tubelike, and trimmed with blue ruffles to the waist, which is plain and loosely bloused. A straight loose coat of the same material is trimmed about the bottom, with two of the ruffles, which also finish the long sleeves of easy width.

Prunet, who is showing in models so many ruffled effects, has also several in which a slight change in the drapery varies the line of the gown, and this is done with equal charm in evening and daytime frocks. One especially smart, simple model is in one piece, the skirt being drawn about the figure from the back toward the front at one side, where it is lifted and held with an ornament, to fall in a slight cascade. A soft turnover collar finishes the gown at the throat, and the sleeves are tight and long, extending well over the hand.

Simplicity is the keynote of all the gowns shown by French artists, and even those elaborated to the extent of flounces and drapery are distinguished by the one feature, whatever it may be, for trimming of any sort is used with much restraint. Among the well-known designers, Cheruit shows extreme simplicity, almost severity, depending upon some startling note to mark distinction, especially in evening gowns. From this house have come several designs showing radical changes in outline, some quite sensational. It is Cheruit who most daringly offers the panner or extended hip trimming, and drapes the material low on the frock, down from the knee.

Things More Ornate. Lanvin goes in for things somewhat more ornate, and does with equal success the period gown. Few of the models from this artist have the perfectly plain skirt, and in almost all of them the material is draped and some embroidery is introduced. Among Lanvin's evening dresses the most conspicuously successful model is the wide-skirted "robe de style," with the little tight haque-bodice which has so securely captured the fancy of fashionably gowning women and which Lanvin has expressed elaborately and with more cachet than any other couturiers.

These gowns of quaint style have formed the one contrasting note to the accepted conventional modes, and they promise to have a lasting vogue. The universal popularity of the topcoat, an outer wrap of some sort to be worn with every type of gown but the suit, has tended to lighten the weight of the dress itself, and few models are shown in any material heavier than satin, crepe or one of the new silks.

For the exceptional one-piece gown (kashin cloth is the favorite, with which is usually worn the chic fur Jaquette or as the season advances a neckpiece of fur or any of the new fashionable accents. In colors, brown has become almost as staple as black, and is shown in many lovely shades, from coal to lavender. With it are worn shoes and stockings in soft beige or tan.

He Got Even

"You must find that impediment in your speech rather inconvenient at times, Mr. Riggs?"
"Oh, no; everybody has his peculiarity. Stammering is mine."
"Well, really, I am not aware that I have any."
"Do you stir your tea with your right hand?"
"Why, yes, of course."
"Well, that is your peculiarity; most people use a teaspoon."

The Cure.

Chloro—Some weeks ago you gave me a plaster to enable me to get rid of lumbago.
Druggist—Well, did it work?

Quick Change Needed.

Robby—Can't I change my name today, ma?
Mother—What in the world do you want to change your name for?
Robby—Gee, ma, I said he will whip me when he gets home, as sure as my name's Robert.

Too Many Salutes Cheapen Flag, Says Teacher, Who Quits Job, Bored By Rite

MRS. FRANCES OLDER

PALISADES PARK, N. J.—Can a teacher be patriotic and loyal to her country and refuse to salute the American flag every day? Mrs. Frances Older has just resigned from the Palisades Park public schools because she says she tired of the "empty form" of saluting the flag daily.

"It's silly—such compulsory salutes cheapen the flag," Mrs. Older told the board of education. "I grew so used to the daily salute that I performed it without thinking what it meant. If that is patriotism, I'm through."

The school board accepted her resignation, and made no return when Mrs. Older designed them as "Main Streets."

P. R. R. WOMEN'S AID SOCIETY VISITS 15,161 IN YEAR

The Women's Aid of the Pennsylvania Railroad System, in 1934, completed its year of greatest activity and usefulness. This is shown by reports from the various regions and divisions, which are now being compiled, preparatory to the holding of the annual meeting in Philadelphia early in the spring.

During the past year this group of women workers, consisting chiefly of wives, daughters, mothers and sisters of Pennsylvania Railroad employees, visited 15,161 railroad families, giving assistance, where required. In the form of money, medical attention, food, clothing, fuel, etc., and carrying flowers, fruits and other delicacies to the sick or injured. In carrying on this work, there was expended $81,157.00, all raised by dues and voluntary contributions of the members.

The holding of headquarters, sales of candy and clothing, subscription dances, etc. The total membership of the Aid rose to 117,023 at the close of the year.

The Women's Aid of the Pennsylvania Railroad System was originally organized in November, 1917, under the name of "The Pennsylvania Railroad Women's Division for War Relief."

Important State Pure Water Streams To Be Protected

HARRISBURG, Feb. 19.—Hans-

waters of the important rivers of the State located in Pennsylvania are to be "protected" from pollution as the result of the new policy outlined by the Sanitary Water Board today.

W. L. Stevenson, secretary of the board, announced that 1,000 miles of streams have been listed in this class. They include 200 miles in Cameron county, 300 miles in Franklin county and all streams totalling 500 miles in Fulton county.

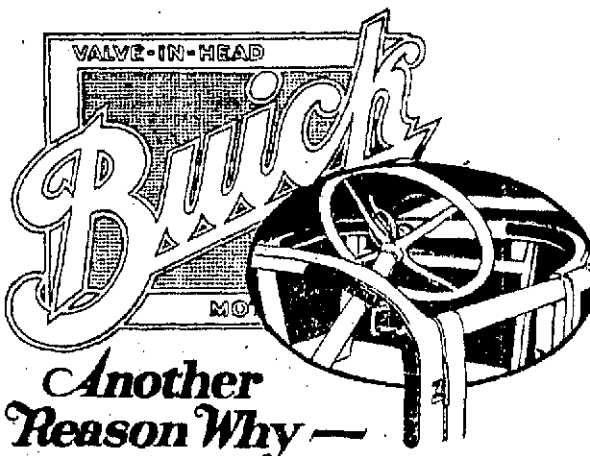

Plum warblers and forest rangers are charting the streams of the State in line with this policy of conservation.

No waste water of any kind will be permitted to enter these "Class A" streams which are to be reserved for bathing, swimming and recreational purposes.

An unuzzled Tubble or Tom found on the street or even in the front or back yards of their homes will be shot immediately, says the edict, whether the time is night or day.

The order results from the recent discovery of several cats suffering from hydrophobia. Dog muzzling began a year ago.

Improving His Chances. Cashier—I don't believe, dear, that your father will consent to our marriage.
Banker's Daughter—Oh, yes, he will, after he has examined your books. He will want to keep the money in the family.—Phoenix.

Another Reason Why—

Buick Body Construction

In constructing its open car bodies, Buick uses bolts in fastening the metal braces to the wood, instead of ordinary screws. These bolts passing completely through the wooden frame prevent joints from loosening under driving strains. A more than usual number of bolts secure the Buick body to the chassis, holding it rigidly in position and entirely eliminating all squeaks and rattles.
